Instrumental Variables

2.1 Estimating Returns to Education for Married Women

We'll use the data from A. Mroz (1987), "The Sensitivity of an Empirical Model of Married Women's Hours of Work to Economic and Statistical Assumptions," Econometrica 55, 765-799.

We'll use the data on married working women to estimate the return to education using a simple OLS model.

Our likely biased OLS model results in the following

Our estimate implies that the returns to education is $\exp(.109)-1 \times 100$ about 11.5%. Notice that we are using stored values for $\hat{\beta}_{edu}$ with `__b[edu]`.

display (exp(__b[educ])-1)*100

```

We will use father's education as an instrument for the observation's level of education if the women is in the labor force. We will use the predict command to get estimates of $\hat{x}$

For instrument relevance, let's obtain the F-Statistic after regressing education onto father's education.

```

      F( 1, 426) =   88.84
      Prob > F =   0.0000

2.2. EXERCISE: ESTIMATING RETURNS TO EDUCATION FOR MEN 9

Our F-test shows that the instrument is greater than $F - stat > 15$, so it seems like a relevant candidate for an instrument. This does not mean it is a good instrument, though.

Question? The F-test passed the instrument relevance $F - stat > 15$, but what about instrument exogeneity?

2.2 Exercise: Estimating Returns to Education for Men

Let's estimate the returns to education for men. We'll use data from M. Blackburn and D. Neumark (1992), "Unobserved Ability, Efficiency Wages, and Interindustry Wage Differentials," Quarterly Journal of Economics 107, 1421-1436.

Use number of siblings as an instrument to predict an observation's level of education. We'll keep it simple and have no other covariates.

1. Estimate the potentially biased OLS

2. Estimate your first stage $\hat{x}$
3. Test your first stage
4. Run your second regression using $\hat{x}$ from your first regression

- 1) Estimate the potential biased OLS

Another thing that is interesting here is the the OLS estimate is biased downward, which is not what we would expect.

Possible reasons: 1. Siblings could be correlated with ability - more siblings, less parental attention which could result in lower ability. 2. The OLS estimator is downward biased due to measurement error in educ, but this is less likely to satisfy the classic error-in-variables (CEM) assumption.

2.3 Smoking on Birthweight

It is important to see an example of a poor instrument. We'll use data from . Mullahy (1997), "Instrumental-Variable Estimation of Count Data Models: Applications to Models of Cigarette Smoking Behavior," Review of Economics and Statistics 79, 596-593.

The biased OLS regression looks at the natural log of birth weight and cigarette packs smoked per day by the mother. We would expect that smoking is correlated with unobserved health and parental decisions, so it is like biased due to unobserved confounders.

display (exp(-.08981)-1)*100

We'll use cigarette prices as an instrument for cigarette packs smoked per day. We assume that cigarette prices and the error term u are uncorrelated (instrument exogeneity). Note that some states fund health care with cigarette tax revenue. We will use cigarette price and quantity of packs smoked should be negatively correlated.

reg packs cigprice
```

Source	SS	df	MS	Number of obs	=	1,388

_cons	.0674257	.1025384	0.66	0.511	-.1337215 .2685728

The result shows that we fail to reject the null hypothesis that $\beta_{cigprice}$ is equal to 0. From theory, we know that something is wrong, since our instrument, price of cigarettes, is not associated with packs of cigarettes consumed.

We will still check instrument relevance:

test cigprice
```

```
( 1)  cigprice = 0
```

F( 1, 1386) =    0.13
Prob > F =    0.7179

Our instrument fails the F-test - we have a weak instrument.

Cigarette price as an instrument for packs smoked is a poor instrument and our use of predicted packs smoked is in the wrong direction.

predict packs_hat reg lbwght packs_hat

_cons	4.448136	.1843027	24.13	0.000	4.086594	4.809679

Our results show that something is terribly wrong. An additional package of cigarette is correlated with an massive increase in birth weight, which is not supported empirically. Our biased OLS was a better model than our poor instrument model.

We can and should always test Instrument Relevance. If we have a poor instrument, we should go back to the drawing board.

Another issue here is that price is a poor instrument, since price and quantity are simultaneously determined. We would need a second set of instruments on price to estimate our first-stage.

2.4 Estimating Returns to Education for Married Women Part 2

We'll use Mroz data again on working women. We'll use both parent's education as instruments to identify the effect of education on wages for working women. We overidentify the endogenous variable with two instruments: father's education and mother's education.

If want to see if our explanatory variable of interest is potentially endogenous with the error term, then we can conduct an endogeneity test. There are two ways to test for potential endogeneity in the OLS model

1. Manually
2. estat postestimation command

3.1.1 Manually Test

To calculate the test manually, first we estimate the reduced form for $\hat{x}_{edu}$ by regressing all exogenous variables onto x_{edu} by including all other x_i in the structural model and the additional IVs z_i .

First, estimate the reduced form equation (first stage).

We have weak evidence that education is endogenous, since $p < .1$ but $p > .05$. However, we know from theory that ability is a confounder on wages and education. We should report both OLS and IV models.

3.2 Testing Overidentifying Restrictions

We will testing overidentifying restrictions using the data from “Returns to Education for Working Women”. When we have one IV for one endogenous explanatory variable, we have a just identified equation. When we have two instruments and one endogenous explanatory variable we have overidentification.

When we have multiple IVs, we can test to see some of our instruments are correlated with the structural error term.

We can estimate two 2sls models (one for each IV) and then compare them. They should only differ by the sampling error. If our two beta coefficients on our fitted explanatory variable of interest are different then, we conclude that at least one instrument or maybe both is/are correlated with the structural error term.

When we add too many instrumental variables (or overidentification), we can increase the efficiency of the 2SLS estimator. However, we may run the risk of violating the instrument exogeneity assumption.

When we use motheredu and fatheredu as IVs for education, we have a single overidentification restriction. We have two IVs and 1 endogenous explanatory variable. We have two ways to calculate this test: manually and estat.

3.2.1 Manually Test

Use an 2SLS model with mother’s education and father’s education as two IVs.

Under the null hypothesis that all IVs are uncorrelated with u_1 $NR^2 \sim \chi_q^2$, where q is the number of instruments from outside the model minus the total number of endogenous explanatory variables. If NR^2 exceeds the 5% critical value in χ_q^2 , then we reject the null hypothesis and conclude that at least some of the IVs are not exogenous.

Here we have $q = 2 - 1 = 1$ df for the chi-squared test and we fail to reject the null hypothesis since $NR^2 = 0.37807$ and χ_1^2 at the 5% critical value is 3.841.

Chapter 4

Creating Variables

Mitchell Chapter 6

Overview 1. Generate and replace commands 2. Numeric expressions and functions 3. String expressions and functions 4. Recoding 5. Binary and Categorical variables 6. Date and Time functions 7. EGEN commands 8. Converting Strings to Numerics 9. Renaming and Reordering commands

The generate and replace will be the workhorses of creating and modifying variables. We'll deal with generating binary variables. We'll look into missing data and how to handle it. Note: Please do not label your missing data, it just is a pain to deal with later The egen command is also a very practical and useful (I wish other software packages had this type of command). We'll deal with strings and converting between numerics and strings.

4.1 Creating and changing variables

One of the most basic tasks is to create, replace, and modify variables. Stata provides some nice and easy commands to work with variable generation and modification relative to other statistical software packages: generate and replace. These will be the workhorses for the creation and modification of variables.

As we go through Mitchell's Chapter 6, we'll see that these are not the only two commands we will utilize. For example, Stata has a very helpful command called egen. It can be used to create new variables from old variables, especially when working with groups of observations. Egen becomes even more helpful when it is combined with bysort. We can sort our group and find the max, min, sum, etc. of a group of observations, which can come in handy when we are working with panel data. Furthermore, using indexes can make our generation commands more useful for creating lags or rebasing our data.

4.1.1 Generate command

The generate or gen command is one command that you may already have plenty of experience with, but there are some helpful tips when working with generate. What we'll do first is to create a new variable called potential experience and potential experience squared.

Let's look at ages for workers earning weekly wages.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Data/CPS" use smalljul25pub, clear summarize prtage if prrelg==1 generate pot_exp=prtage-16 summarize pot_exp if prrelg==1
```

/Users/Sam/Desktop/Data/CPS

Variable	Obs	Mean	Std. Dev.	Min	Max
prtage	9,635	42.43778	14.74111	15	85

(28,617 missing values generated)

Variable	Obs	Mean	Std. Dev.	Min	Max
pot_exp	9,635	26.43778	14.74111	-1	69

Look for outliers and generate a histogram for outliers

histogram pot_exp if prrelg==1 graph export "jul_25_pot_exp.png", replace
```

Now let's create a new variable for potential experience squared. We have two options:

gen pot_exp2 = pot_exp*pot_exp sum pot_exp2
drop pot_exp2

gen pot_exp2 = pot_exp^2
sum pot_exp2
```

(28,617 missing values generated)

Variable	Obs	Mean	Std. Dev.	Min	Max
pot_exp2	93,635	1269.006	1345.314	0	4761

(28,617 missing values generated)

Variable	Obs	Mean	Std. Dev.	Min	Max
pot_exp2	93,635	1269.006	1345.314	0	4761

Notice! Our age variable, prtage, is missing when the value is -1. The data dictionary provides us the information that -1 is a holder for missing data. Please note that when missing values are “-1”, we will see missings in an outlier check! Why? Because missing values are considered very large values. This is important because when creating binary or categorical variables through qualifiers, make sure you top code your qualifiers.

For example, if we are creating a binary on part-time vs full-time. We need to top code so we don't count missing hours as full-time workers,

gen fulltime if hours > 35 & hours < 999999,

Alternatively, you can use the missing function.

gen fulltime if hours > 35 & !missing(hours)
```

Let's generate weekly earnings and plot the data. The CPS data dictionary tells us that pternwa is the weekly earnings, but it needs to be divided by 100 to get two decimal places.

gen earnings=pternwa/100
histogram earnings if prerelg==1, title(Weekly Earnings) graph export "jul_25_weekly_earnings.png", replace

Another helpful trick is the before and after options. It might be helpful to have the newly created variable next to a similar variable, so let's drop our variable and generate it again with the after option

drop weekwage gen hrlyearn = pternwa/pehract1, after(pternwa) drop hrlyearn
gen hrlyearn = pternwa/pehract1, before(pternwa)

4.1.2 Replace

We use our replace command to modify a variable that has already been created. Similar to generate, you probably already have experience with replace, but we'll go over some useful tips.

Qualifiers will be an essential part of your syntax when using the replace command.

Let's generate a variable called marital status and look at married and never-married variables.

quietly cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell" quietly use wws, clear tabulate married nevermarried

married	Woman never been married		Total 0	1
0	570	234	804
1	1,440	2	1,442
Total	2,010	236	2,246

We'll generate a new variable called maritalstatus.

```
gen maritalstatus = .

I recommend generating a new categorical variable as missing instead of zero, because this prevents missing variables from being categorized as 0 when applicable.

We generally use qualifiers “=, >, <, >=, <=, !” when working with replace. Let's replace the marital status variable with married and nevermarried as qualifiers replace maritalstatus = 1 if married==0 & nevermarried==1 replace maritalstatus = 2 if married==1 & nevermarried==0

replace maritalstatus = 3 if married==0 & nevermarried==0
```

It's always a good idea to double check the varilabes against the variables they were created from to make sure your categories are what they are supposed to be.

tabulate maritalstatus
table maritalstatus married nevermarried
```

maritalstat	us	Freq.	Percent	Cum.
1		234	10.43	10.43
2		1,440	64.17	74.60
3		570	25.40	100.00
Total		2,244	100.00

maritalst	0	1
atus	0	1
1		234
2	1,440
3	570

What will be helpful is to label our values, but we'll cover this next week.

We can also use the replace command with a continuous variable in the qualifier

Let's create a new variable called over40hours which will be categorized as 1 if it is over 40 hours, and 0 if it is 40 or under.

generate over40hours = .
replace over40hours = 0 if hours <= 40
```

We need to make sure we don't include missing values so we need an additional qualifier besides hours > 40. We need to add !missing(hours).

replace over40hours = 1 if hours > 40 & !missing(hours)
```

Now let's see the results.

tab over40hours tab over40hours, sum(hours)
```

over40hours	Freq.	Percent	Cum.
0	1,852	82.60	82.60
1	390	17.40	100.00
Total	2,242	100.00

Summary of usual hours worked over40hours	Mean	Std. Dev.	Freq.
0	34.50054	9.0449086	1,852
1	50.123077	6.6961395	390
Total	37.218109	10.509135	2,242

4.2 Numeric expressions and functions

Our standard numeric expressions 1. addition +, 2. subtraction -, 3. multiplication *, 4. division /, 5. exponentiation ^, and 6. parentheses () for changing order of operation.

We also have some very useful numeric functions built into Stata:

The int() function removes any decimals.

The round() function rounds a number to the desired decimal place. Please note that this is different from Excel!!!

The round(x,y) rounds the numbers to the specified nearest value. Where x is your numeric and y is the nearest value you wish to round to.

For example: 1. if $y = 1$, $\text{round}(-5.2,1)=-5$ and $\text{round}(4.5)=5$ 2. if $y=.1$, $\text{round}(10.16,.1)=10.2$ and $\text{round}(34.1345,.1)=34.1$ 3. if $y=10$, $\text{round}(313.34,10)=310$ and $\text{round}(4.52,10)=0$

Note: if y is missing, then it will round to the nearest integer $\text{round}(10.16)=10$

The ln() function is our natural log function which we use a lot for transforming variables for elasticity estimates.

The log10() function is our logarithm base-10 function.

The sqrt() function is our square root function

display int(10.65) display round(10.65,1) display ln(10.65) display log10(10.65) display sqrt(10.65)
```

10

11

2.3655599

1.0273496

3.2634338

Please note `int(10.65)` returns 10, while `round(10.65,1)` returns 11.

4.2.1 Random Numbers and setting seeds

There are several random number generating functions in Stata.

runiform() is a random uniform distribution number generator has a distribution between 0 and 1.

rnormal(m,sd) is a random normal distribution number generator without arguments it will assume mean = 0 and sd = 1.

rchi2(df) is a random chi-squared distribution number generator where df is the degrees of freedom that need to be specified

Let's look at some examples.

Setting seeds is important if you want someone to replicate your results, since a set seed will generate the same random number each time it is run.

*Set our seed set seed 12345

*Random uniform distribution gen runiformtest = runiform() summarize runiformtest

*Random normal distribution
gen rnormaltest = rnormal()
gen rnormaltest2 = rnormal(100,15)
```

```
summarize rnormaltest rnormaltest2
```

```
*Random chi-squared distribution
```

gen rchi2test = rchi2(5)
```

```
summarize rchi2test

4.3 String Expressions and functions

Working with string can be a pain, but there are some very helpful functions that will get your task completed.

help string functions
```

Let's get some new data to work with strings and their functions.

We'll format the names with left-justification 17 characters long.

quietly cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell" use "authors.dta", clear format name %-17s list name
```

	name
1.	Ruth Canaale
2.	Y. Don Uflossmore
3.	thích nhất hạnh
4.	J. Carreño Quiñones
5.	Ô Knausgård

```

6. | Don b Iteme          |
7. | isaac O'yerbreath   |
8. | Mike avity          |
9. |      ÉMILE ZOLA     |
10. | i William Crown    |
    |-----|
11. | Ott W. Onthurt     |
12. | Olive Tu'Drill     |
13. | björk guðmundsdóttir |
    +-----+

Notice white space(s) in front of some names and some names are not in the proper format (lowercase for initial letter instead of upper).

To fix these, we have a three string functions to work with.

The ustrtitle() function is the Unicode function to convert strings to title cases, which means that the first letter is always upper and all others are lower case for each word.

The ustrlower() is the Unicode function to convert strings to lower case.

The ustrupper() is the Unicode function to convert strings to upper case.

Please note that there are string function that do something similar but in ASCII. Our names are not in ASCII currently, so please note that not all string characters come in ASCII, but may come in Unicode: 1. strproper() 2. strlower() 3. strupper()

We'll generate some names and format our strings to 23 length and left-justified generate name2 = ustrtitle(name) generate lowname = ustrlower(name) generate upname = ustrupper(name) format name2 lowname upname %-23s list name2 lowname upname

	name2	lowname	upname

13.		Björk Guðmundsdóttir	björk guðmundsdóttir	BJÖRK GUÐMUNDSDÓTTIR
+-----+

We still need to get rid of leading white spaces in front of the name. The `ustrltrim()` will get rid of leading blanks.

generate name3 = ustrltrim(name2) format name2 name3 %-17s list name name2 name3
```

		name	name2	name3

1.		Ruth Canaale	Ruth Canaale	Ruth Canaale

+-----+

Let's work with the initials to identify the initial. In small datasets this is easy enough, but for large datasets we'll need to use some functions.

4.3.1 substr functions

One of the more practical string functions is the substr functions:

The `usubstr(s,n1,n2)` is our Unicode substring.

The `substr(s,n1,n2)` is our ASCII substring

Where s is the string, n1 is the starting position, n2 is the length

display substr("abcdef",2,3)
```

bcd
```

Let's find names that start with the initial with `substr`. We'll start at the 2nd position and move 1 character. Let's use ASCII and compare it to Unicode.

gen secondchar = substr(name3,2,1)
gen firstinit = (secondchar == " " | secondchar == ".") if !missing(secondchar)

We might want to break up a string as well. This is helpful for names, addresses, etc. We can use the `strwordcount` function.

The `ustrwordcount(s)` counts the number of words using word-boundary rules of Unicode strings. Where `s` is the string input.

generate namecount = ustrwordcount(name3) list name3 namecount
```

	name3	namecount
1.	Ruth Canaale	2
2.	Y. Don Uflossmore	4
3.	Thích Nhất Hạnh	3
4.	J. Carreño Quiñones	4
5.	Ô Knausgård	2
6.	Don B Iteme	3
7.	Isaac O'yербreath	2
8.	Mike Avity	2
9.	Émile Zola	2
10.	I William Crown	3
11.	Ott W. Onthurt	4
12.	Olive Tu'drill	2
13.	Björk Guðmundsdóttir	2

Notice that there are three authors have a word count of 4 instead of 3 when it should be three.

To extract the words after word count, we can use the `ustrword()` command. `ustrword(s,n)` returns the word in the string depending upon `n`. Note: a positive `n` returns the `n`th word from the left, while a `-n` returns the `n`th word from the right.

generate uname1=ustrword(name3,1)
generate uname2=ustrword(name3,2)
generate uname3=ustrword(name3,3)
generate uname4=ustrword(name3,4)
list name3 uname1 uname2 uname3 uname4 namecount

```

It seems that `ustrwordcount` counts “.” as separate words, so let’s use another very helpful string function called `subinstr`, which comes in Unicode `usubinstr()` and ASCII `subinstr()` `usubinstr(s1,s2,s3,n)` replaces the nth occurrence of `s2` in `s1` with `s3`.

`subinstr(s1,s2,s3,n)` is the same thing but for ASCII.

Where `s1` is our string, `s2` is the string we want to replace, `s3` is the string we want instead, and `n` is the nth occurrence of `s2`.

If `n` is missing or implied, then all occurrences of `s2` will be replaced.

generate name4 = usubinstr(name3,".",",",.)
replace namecount = ustrwordcount(name4)
list name4 namecount

```

Some names have the middle initial first, so let's rearrange. The middle initial will only have a string length of one, so we need our string length functions. ustrlen(s) returns the length of the string.

strlen(s) is the same as above but for ASCII

Let's add the period back to the middle initial if the string length is 1.

replace fname=fname + "." if ustrlen(fname)==1 replace mname=mname + "." if ustrlen(mname)==1 list fname mname

If you are brave enough, learning regular express can pay off in the long run. Stata has string functions with regular express, such as finding particular sets of strings with regexm(). Regular expressions are a pain to work with, but they are very powerful.

4.4 Recoding

4.4.1 Recoding with categorical variables

We can use the recode command to modify existing values of a variable. It is particularly helpful when working with categorical variables.

Let's get some data on working women and look at the codebook

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/" use "wws2lab.dta", clear codebook occupation, tabulate(25)
```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell
```

```
(Working Women Survey w/fixes)
```

```
-----
occupation
-----
```

              type:  numeric (byte) label:  occlbl range:  [1,13] unique values:  13              units:  1 missing .:  9/2,246

tabulation:  Freq.   Numeric  Label 319      1  Professional/technical 264      2  Managers/admin
              725      3  Sales
              101      4  Clerical/unskilled
               53      5  Craftsmen
              246      6  Operatives
               28      7  Transport
              286      8  Laborers
               1       9  Farmers
               9      10  Farm laborers
              16      11  Service
               2      12  Household workers
              187     13  Other
               9       .
```

Let's say we want aggregated groups of occupation. We could use a categorical variable strategy to create a with gen and replace with qualifiers. We can also use the recode command for faster groupings

recode occupation (1/3=1) (5/8=2) (4 9/13=3), generate(occ3) tab occupation occ3
table occupation occ3
```

(1918 differences between occupation and occ3)

We can also label are variables in the recode command. This can add to your consolidation of code.

Tangent Let's look at the syntax. In Stata `#n1/#n2` means all values between `#n1` and `#n2`. This is similar to `c(#n1:#n2)` in R. `#n1 #n2` means only values `#n1 #n2`. For example, if we wanted to see the first 10 observations, we can use `1/10`. `1/10` means 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

list hours in 1/10
```

```

      | hours |
      |-----|
1.   |    38 |
2.   |    35 |
3.   |    40 |
4.   |    40 |
5.   |    35 |
      |-----|
6.   |    40 |
7.   |    35 |
8.   |    36 |
9.   |    35 |
10.  |    40 |
      +-----+

```

If we wanted to see the last 10 observations, we can use `-10/-1`

list hours in -10/-1
```

```

      | hours |
      |-----|
2237. |    50 |
2238. |     8 |

```

2239. |    45 |
2240. |    40 |
2241. |    30 |
      |-----|
2242. |    48 |
2243. |    42 |
2244. |    40 |
2245. |    40 |
2246. |    48 |
      +-----+

In our syntax above, (4 9/13) means 4 9 10 11 12 13.

In my opinion, this syntax is annoying, since we use a space to delimit 4 and 9 instead of a comma. In R, it would be:

c(4,9:13)
```

```
[1]  4  9 10 11 12 13

4.4.2 Recoding with continuous variables

You can use recode with continuous variables to create categorical variables, such as wages, hours, etc. However, I recommend the replace command instead. Occupation is a categorical variable, so the recode works well when working with categorical variables in the first place.

Note: There is recode(), irecode(), and autocode(), but I recommend using gen and replace with qualifiers instead. You don't want overlapping groups and with qualifiers you can ensure they don't overlap.

Egen is powerful that has many useful command that we will cover in more detail below. A command that is useful for recoding continuous variables is egen cut. Let's look at wages.

summarize wage, detail

hourly wage

4.26 is our 25th percentile; 6.27 is our median; and 9.66 is our 75th percentile. You can use these breakpoints with at or equal lengths with group. Make sure your first breakpoint is at the minimum so you don't cut off data. E.g.: Our first value needs to be zero for wages, since this is the minimum.

I still recommend using `gen`, `replace`, and `qualifiers` for generating categorical variables from continuous variables.

4.4.3 Recoding values to missing

If you are interested, you can review different ways to code missing values. I generally just use “.”, but when survey data comes back, there may be different reasons for missing. N/A vs Did not respond may have different meanings and you may want to account for that.

We will take a brief look at `mvdecode()` to recode all missing values coded as -1 and -2 to. It can be a bit faster than using `replace` for every variable of interest.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/"

The mvdecode command can be very helpful with files such as the CPS where missing values are set at -1. Some datasets set their missing as very large numbers, such as 99999.

4.5 i. Operator

Stata has an easy way to incorporate binary/categorical/dummy variables. Factors variables for dummy variables start with an i. operator in our regressions. We will see d., s., and l. operators when we cover panel data and time series.

4.5.1 Creating Binary and Categorical variables

Creation of dummy variables is a common and vital process in econometric analysis. Making mutually exclusive groups is essential for preventing multicollinearity and perfect multicollinearity.

If we don't use an i. operator for categorical variables, then we need to generate multiple binary (0/1) variables from our categorical group. If we don't use factor variables or mutually exclusive binary variables from our categorical, then Stata will think our categorical variable is a continuous variable, which does not have any interpretation.

Let's look at our highest grade completed categorical.

Let's use it in a regression with grade4 as a factor variable.

regress wage i.grade4

Stata knows to create 4 groups “NHS” “HS” “SC” and “CD”, and by default. Stata excludes the first category to prevent perfect multicollinearity. So, there will always be $ k-1 $ groups in the regress and the kth group is in the intercept.

A nice feature with factor variables is that we can change the base group, which is 1 by default. `ib2.var` means to use the variable as a factor variable and use the 2nd category as the base group.

regress wage ib2.grade4

4.6 Interactions

Interactions are an important part of Stata. Interactions `#` can interact categorical-categorical, categorical-continuous, or continuous-continuous.

4.6.1 Categorical-Categorical Interaction - Changes Intercepts

We can interact two categorical variables to get different intercepts for each group.

Let's interact married and high grade completed.

A single # interacts only the two categoricals, while ## between two categorical will create all groups (except the base group). No High School and unmarried is the base group (intercept) All grade4 coefficients are returns to education for unmarried relative to the base reference group. All grade4#married coefficients are returns to education for married relative to the base reference group. Remember: This changes the intercepts for all groups and the base group is the intercept.

4.6.2 Categorical-continuous - changes intercepts and slopes

We use the c. operator to define continuous variables in an interaction. Interacting categorical and continuous variables allows for different slopes and different intercepts. We define a continuous variable as “c.var” and a categorical as “i.var”

4.7 Date Variables

Dates can be a pain to work with, but Mitchell's and UCLA's OARC STATA resources (<https://stats.oarc.ucla.edu/stata/modules/using-dates-in-stata/>) can be very helpful.

Dates and times can be very helpful when working with time series data or panel data.

Sometimes dates are separated in columns and we need to append them and set the date format

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/"

4.7.1 Create Dates from numerical variables

Using the function `mdy()`, we can create the mother's birthday with the numerical values for day, month, and year.

list mombdate momm momd momy
```

```

```

4.7.2 Create Dates from string variables

Using the function `date()`, we can create kid's birthday from string values.

generate kidbdate=date(kidbday,"MDY") list kiddbay kidbate

Notice that the dates are not in a format that we can work with easily. These values represent the days from Jan 1, 1960. You can see the Mom's birthday on Jan 5, 1960 is 4. We can difference the dates, so Jan 5, 1960 is 4 and Jan 1, 1960 is 0.

We saw this a couple week ago, but our format %td is what we need and remember that are a lot of variations on %td, but ultimately Stata still sees Jan 5, 1960 is 4 and Jan 1, 1960 is 0, etc.

format mombdate kidbdate %td list
```

1. nn is for 1-12 months; NN is for 01-12 months.
2. dd is for 1-31 days; DD is for 01-31 days.
3. YY is for 2-digit year (regardless of first two digits).
4. cc is for first 2-digits of year.
5. ccYY is for 4-digit year.
6. Dayname will return Sunday-Saturday.
7. Mon will return month name.

We can use “,” , “-” , “/” and “ ” where ”” is for a blank space

format mombdate kidbdate %tdDayname_Mon_DD,_ccYY list kidbday kidbdate
```

4.	1/4/2004	Sunday Jan 04, 2004

4.7.3 Calculate differences between dates

Remember that we can difference between dates as mentioned above, since Stata keeps dates as numerical days from Jan 1, 1960.

generate momagediff=kidbdate-mombdate list mombdate kidbdate momagediff
```

	mombdate	kidbdate	momagediff
1.	Tuesday Nov 28, 1972	Monday Jan 05, 1998	9169
2.	Tuesday Apr 03, 1973	Thursday Apr 11, 2002	10600
3.	Thursday Jun 13, 1968	Wednesday May 15, 1996	10198
4.	Tuesday Jan 05, 1960	Sunday Jan 04, 2004	16070

We can find years by dividing by 365.25.

generate momagediffyr = (kidbdate-mombdate)/365.25 list mombdate kidbdate momagediffyr
```

	mombdate	kidbdate	momagediffyr

4.	Tuesday Jan 05, 1960	Sunday Jan 04, 2004	43.997262

4.7.4 Return day, month, or year from a date variable

You can always insert a static date in the `mdy()` function or `date()` function

display (mdy(4,5,2005)-mdy(5,6,2000))/365.25
```

```
4.9144422
```

We can always use a qualifier to find people born before, after, not on, or on a certain date.

list momid mombdate if (mombdate >= mdy(1,20,1970)) & !missing(mombdate)

	momid		mombdate

1.	1	Tuesday Nov 28, 1972
2.	2	Tuesday Apr 03, 1973

Let's say we want just the day, month, or year from a date variable. Then we have a few functions: 1. `day(date)` returns a numeric of the day. 2. `month(date)` returns a numeric of the month. 3. `year(date)` returns a numeric of the year. 4. `week(date)` returns a numeric of the week out of (1-52). 5. `quarter(date)` returns a numeric of the quarter (1-4). 6. `dow(date)` returns day of the week as a numeric (0=Sunday,...,6=Saturday). 7. `doy(date)` returns a numeric of the day of the year (1-365) or (1-366).

This can be helpful when trying to compare time for a panel data set and we don't need day - just month and year -. I use this quite a bit with CPS data, since we have two numeric date variables: `hrmonth` and `hryear4`. If we have the month and the year, we can use `ym(Y,M)` to create a month-year date variable. Then, we can use the `xtset` set command, which we will review during our panel data discussions. Remember, the month-year value will be the number of months since Jan 1960.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Data/CPS/"
use "smalljul25pub", clear gen monyear = ym(hryear4, hrmonth) list monyear in 1/10, sepby(5)
```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Data/CPS
```

5 invalid name option sepby() incorrectly specified r(198);

r(198);
```

We can see that Jul 2025 is 786 months since Jan 1960. We use the %tm format for months and year to have the values in a more user friendly format.

format monyear %tmMon_ccYY list monyear
```

4.8 Date and Time Variables

Section 6.8 provides helpful information using dates AND times. You may run across time formats, and I'll refer you to pages 179-186 for future reference. For some reason you had birth date and time, you can use the mdyhms() function and the format %tc

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell" import delimited using "momkid1a.csv", clear gen momdt = mdyhms(momm,momd,momy,momh,mommin,moms) format momdt %tc

```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell
```

4.9 Computations across variables

The egen command is something that I miss in other statistical packages since it is so useful. We can do computation across columns or we can do computation across observations with egen.

For computations across columns/variables, we can look at row means, row mins, row maxs, row missing, row nonmissing, etc. On a personal note, I do not use computations across variables too often. If you have a panel data set, it should be in a long-form format instead of a wide-form format. When you use data in a long-form format, egen across variables has limited uses.

Let's find the mean across pl1-pl5 with row mean instead of $gen\ avgpl = (pl1 + \dots + pl5)/5$

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/" use "cardio2miss.dta", clear egen avgpl=rowmean(pl1-pl5) list id pl1-pl5 avgpl

```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell
```

```

+-----+
| id   pl1   pl2   pl3   pl4   pl5   avgpl |
+-----+
1. | 1     54   115    87    86    93     87 |
2. | 2     92  123    88   136   125   112.8 |
3. | 3    105   .a    97   122   128    113 |
4. | 4     52  105    79   115    71    84.4 |
5. | 5     70  116   .a   128    52    91.5 |
+-----+

```

`rowmeans()` will ignore the missing values. (I wish other statistical packages did this)

egen avgbp=rowmean(bp1-bp5) list id bp1-bp5 avgbp
```

	id	bp1	bp2	bp3	bp4	bp5	avgbp

1.	1	129	81	105	.b	.b	105
2.	2	107	87	111	58	120	96.6
3.	3	101	57	109	68	112	89.4
4.	4	121	106	129	39	137	106.4
5.	5	112	68	125	59	111	95

`rowmin()` returns the row minimum, while `rowmax()` returns the row maximum.

egen maxbp=rowmax(bp1-bp5) egen minbp=rowmin(bp1-bp5) list id bp1-bp5 avgbp maxbp minbp
```

	id	bp1	bp2	bp3	bp4	bp5	avgbp	maxbp	minbp

1.	1	129	81	105	.b	.b	105	129	81
2.	2	107	87	111	58	120	96.6	120	58
3.	3	101	57	109	68	112	89.4	112	57
4.	4	121	106	129	39	137	106.4	137	39
5.	5	112	68	125	59	111	95	125	59

We can find missing or not missing with the `rowmiss()` and `rownonmiss()`

egen missbp = rowmiss(bp?)

Note: the `?` operator differs from the wildcard `*` operator. The `?` operator is a wildcard for 1 character in between so `bp?` will pick up `bp1`, `bp2`, `bp3`, `bp4`, and `bp5`, and `bp?` will exclude `bpavg`, `bpmin`, `bpmax`. Examples: 1. `my*var` variables starting with `my` & ending with `var` with any number of other characters between. 2. `my~var` one variable starting with `my` & ending with `var` with any number of other characters between. 3. `my?var` variables starting with `my` & ending with `var` with one other character between.

Recap: 1. `myvar` is just one variable 2. `myvar thisvar thatvar` are three variables 3. `myvar` are all variables starting with `myvar` 4. `var` are all variables ending with `var` 5. `myvar1-myvar6*` includes `myvar1`, `myvar2`, ..., `myvar6` 6. `this-that` includes variables `this` through `that`, inclusive

4.10 EGEN Computation across observations

EGEN and bysort are a powerful combination for working across groups of observations. This can be very helpful when working with panel data or time series by groups. We will sort by id and then time and perform our egen commands. We have our egen sum, egen total, egen max, egen min, egen mean which will be the main egen commands.

Let's use egen to find the average for groups. Egen without a bysort will return the mean for the entire column, which may or may not be helpful. If we want a mean within a group (or an individual's panel data), we want to sort by groups (or individuals) first and then perform the egen mean.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/" use "gasctrysmall.dta", clear egen avggas = mean(gas) bysort ctry: egen avggas_ctry = mean(gas) list ctry year gas avggas avggas_ctry, sepby(ctry)
```

```

7.	4	1974	.82	.7675	.88
8.	4	1975	.94	.7675	.88

Let's get the max and min for each country.

bysort ctry: egen mingas_ctry = min(gas) bysort ctry: egen maxgas_ctry = max(gas)
```

We can count our observations.

bysort ctry: egen count_ctype=count(gas) list, sepby(ctry)
```

8.	4	1975	.94	1.18	.7675	.88	.82	.94	2

4.10.2 More Egen

This section has more interesting egen commands that you can review if you would like. The workhorse egen commands are above.

4.11 Converting Strings to numerics

These next two section have a lot of practical implications that you find when working with survey and especially administrative data. First we will cover converting numerical characters in strings to numerical data to analyze.

Let's summarize our data, but it comes back blank.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell" use "cardiolstr.dta", clear sum wt bp1 bp2 bp3

```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell
```

wt	0
bp1	0
bp3	0

All of our numerical data are in string formats.

describe
```

```

Contains data from cardiolstr.dta obs:          5

```

```
vars:          11                      22 Dec 2009 19:51 size:          205
```

Sorted by:

4.11.1 Destring

The destring command is our main command to convert numerical characters to numerics. With destring, we have to choose an option of generating a new variable or replace the current variable

destring age, gen(agen)
sum age agen
drop agen

age: all characters numeric; agen generated as byte

age	0
agen	5	37.4	10.83051	23	48

We can destring all of our numerics.

destring id-income, replace
```

quietly {
cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell"
```

use "cardio1str.dta", clear
}
destring id-income, replace

Notice that the replace failed for income and pl3. This is because pl3 has a letter, so all of the data are not all digits. Income has $ and , so it can not convert the data.

We can use the force option with pl3 to convert the X to missing.

list pl3 destring pl3, replace force list pl3
```

```
      | pl3 |
      |-----|
1.    |  93 |
2.    | 125 |
3.    |   X |
4.    |  71 |
5.    |  52 |
      +-----+
```

pl3: contains nonnumeric characters; replaced as int
(1 missing value generated)
```

```
      +-----+
      | pl3 |
      |-----|
1.    |  93 |
2.    | 125 |
3.    |   . |
4.    |  71 |
5.    |  52 |
      +-----+

We cannot use the force option with income, since it contains important information. We need to get rid of the two non-numerical characters of $ and ,

We have two options: eliminate the "$" and "," or use the ignore option in destring. The latter option is easier.

list income destring income, replace ignore("$,") list income
```

```
      |      income |
      |-----|
1. | $25,308.92 |
2. | $46,213.31 |
3. | $65,234.11 |
4. | $89,234.23 |
5. | $54,989.87 |
      +-----+
```

```
income: characters $ , removed; replaced as double
```

```
      +-----+
      |      income |
      |-----|
1. | 25308.92 |
2. | 46213.31 |
3. | 65234.11 |
4. | 89234.23 |
5. | 54989.87 |
      +-----+

4.11.2 Encode

Sometimes we have categorical variables or ID variables that come in as strings. We need to code them as categorical, but strings can be tricky with leading or lagging zeros or misspellings.

One option is to use the encode command, which will generate a new variable that codifies the string variable. This can be very helpful when our id variable in panel data are in string format.

Remember: trim any white space around the string just in case, 1. strtrim() - remove leading and lagging white space 2. strrtrim() - removes lagging white spaces 3. strltrim() - removes leading white spaces 4. stritrim() - removes leading, lagging, and consecutive white spaces

list id gender replace gender = stritrim(gender) encode gender, generate(gendercode) list gender gendercode
```

```

      | id   gender |
      |-----|
1.   | 1     male |
2.   | 2     male |
3.   | 3     male |
4.   | 4     male |
5.   | 5    female |
      +-----+

```

(0 real changes made)

```

      +-----+
      | gender  gender~e |
      |-----|
1.   |  male      male |
2.   |  male      male |
3.   |  male      male |
4.   |  male      male |
5.   | female    female |
      +-----+

```

They look the same, but let's use tabulation

tab gender gendercode, nolabel
```

Gender of person	Gender of person		Total 1	2
female	1	0	1
male	0	4	4
Total	1	4	5

The encode creates label values around the new variable

codebook gendercode
```

```
gendercode
```

      type:  numeric (long) label:  gendercode

      range:  [1,2]                                units:  1

```

unique values: 2                                missing .: 0/5
```

tabulation:  Freq.   Numeric  Label
              1         1  female
              4         2   male

4.11.3 Converting numerics to strings

In my experience, it is more common to destring, but there are situations where you need to convert a numeric to a string. The most common examples from me are zip codes and FIPS codes. We use the tostring command for this process.

As a side note, whenever working with or merging with state-level data, always, always use FIPS codes and not state names or state abbreviations. The probability of a problematic merge is much higher matching on strings than it is on numerics.

cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/" use "cardio3.dta", clear list zipcode
```

```
/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell
```

```
+-----+
| zipcode |
+-----+
1. |    1003 |
2. |    90095 |
3. |    43409 |
4. |    23219 |
5. |    66214 |
+-----+
```

This zip code list is a problem and likely will not merge properly, since zipcodes that have a leading 0 will not match.

tostring zipcode, generate(zips) replace zips = "0" + zips if strlen(zips) == 4
replace zips = "00" + zips if strlen(zips) == 3 list zipcode zips
```

```
zips generated as str5
```

```
(1 real change made)
```

(0 real changes made)

```

+-----+
| zipcode    zips |
+-----+
1. |      1003   01003 |
2. |      90095   90095 |
3. |      43409   43409 |
4. |      23219   23219 |
5. |      66214   66214 |
+-----+

I don't recommend just formatting the data to 5 digits. The data should be formatted exactly for matching and merging between datasets on the key merging variable.

I recommend using tostring, but there is decode which is the opposite of encode. If we want to use the variable labels instead of the numeric for some reason, the decode command can be used.

decode famhist, gen(famhists) list famhist famhists, nolabel codebook famhist famhists

```

```

| famhist    famhists |

4.12 Renaming and reordering

Reordering and renaming seems straightforward enough, but there are some useful tips that will help consolidate your scripts. For example, you don't need to a new rename command for every single variable to be renamed. We can use group renaming.

4.12.1 Rename

The rename command is straightforward, and allows us to rename our variable(s) of interest.

Where ? is an operator for just one character to be different.

An alternate way is to rename by grouping and it prevents any unintended renaming with the ? or * operators.

rename (bp1 bp2 bp3 bp4 bp5) (bpress1 bpress2 bpress3 bpress4 bpress5)

4.12.2 Order

We can move our variables around with the order command. This command can be especially helpful with panel data, since we want the unit id and the time period to be next to one another.

Our variables are out of order and pl and bp alternate, but we may want to keep our pl variables and bp variables next to one another.

Reorder blood pressure and pulse

order id age_yrs bp* pul*

quietly {
cd "/Users/Sam/Desktop/Econ 645/Data/Mitchell/"
use "cardio2.dta", clear rename age age_yrs rename pl? pulse?
rename (bp1 bp2 bp3 bp4 bp5) (bpress1 bpress2 bpress3 bpress4 bpress5)
order id age_yrs bp* pul*
```

Or,

order pul* bp*, after(age_yrs)
```

Or,

order bp*, before(pulse1)
```

If you generate a new variable, it will default to the end, but we may want it somewhere else. Let's say we want age-squared, but we want age-squared to be next to age. We can use the after (or before) option in the generate command.

gen age2=age_yrs*age_yrs, after(age_yrs)
```

If you wanted to reorder the whole dataset alphabetically, then

order _all, alphabetic
```

There is a sequential option as well if your var1, ..., vark are out of order

order bpress5 bpress1-bpress4, after(age2) describe order bp*, sequential
